Room Views

This was another busy week for construction crews! There is still a lot of work to be done, but things are taking shape! It won't be long before they begin dry walling the first floor. Here are some pictures of some interior rooms:

Next Week

Painting preparation has started in the Holding Facility by sanding and filling the block walls. The first coat of primer has been applied, with painting soon to follow. The cell bunks and holding cell benches have been poured while crews continue to install the duct work, piping and door frames.

In the next two weeks, drywall will be installed on the first floor. The walls in the lobby are being prepped for the installation of the stone. Metal panel installation will begin along the eastern walls of the building early next week. At that point you will start to see the finished look on the exterior of the building! ☺
